MVRHS

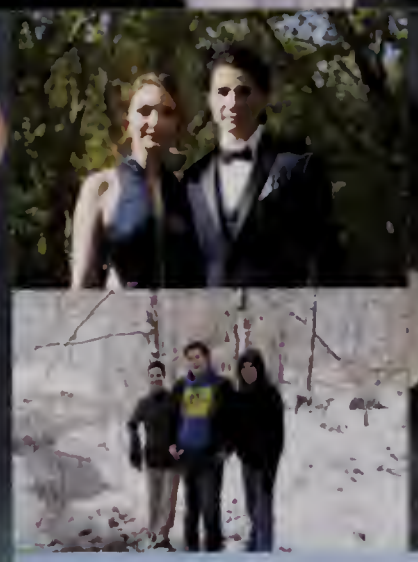
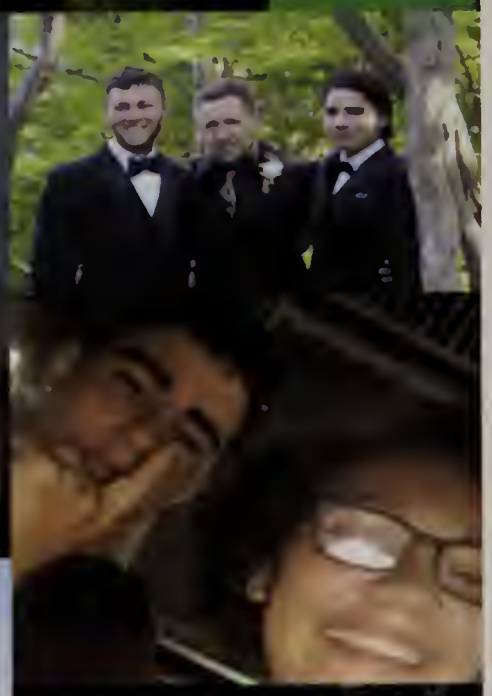
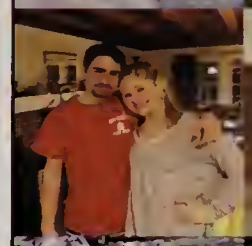
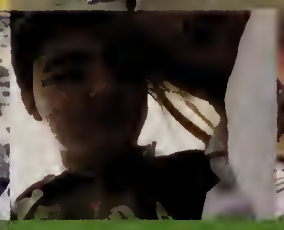
In Dedication to:

Jake Baird









Seniors in the Project Vine program are asked to select a book and write a dedication from them to all students in the program, present and future, who might benefit from reading their legacy book. After they write their dedications, staff talks about what each senior's real "legacy" is to our little family, and we write another paragraph after theirs about what we feel their real gifts to the program were. These dedication panels go right in the front of the books they pick out, and they ceremoniously place them on our "Legacy Bookshelf," the one with the Christmas lights you might have seen if you've walked by the Vine Suite.

WINNER OF THE RENAISSANCE MAN AWARD FOR BEING A SKILLED MECHANIC WITH CARS, WORDS AND NUMBERS

The Giver by Lois Lowry dedicated by Jake Baird

"I'm leaving this book with Project Vine in hopes that people realize sharing is more valuable than keeping– money, thoughts, food, feelings. In my time in Project Vine, I was sort of a lonely person in the beginning. I had friends, relationships and family but I shut everyone out and was sort of mean. Over time I realized that in life, you get what you give. This book helped me see that by sharing, you can accomplish more with other people than keeping to yourself. I hope that this book helps you realize that giving is better than receiving."

This book was dedicated by Jake Baird, class of 2018. Like many students before and after him, Jake struggled to find meaning and purpose in his world, and was willing to discuss and debate things at length in an earnest quest to find just those things. A gifted writer who stole the show at the Haunted Histories Live Storytelling Event in 2017, Jake brushed aside compliments of his written work and continued to value the real-world work of mechanics and engineering. More importantly than that, though, he always had an ear or a shoulder ready for a friend who might need it. Jake's legacy to the Project Vine program is his deep desire that we value each other more than we value anything else.

Letter From The Principal

Congratulations to the MVRHS Class of 2018,

Graduating from MVRHS is truly a milestone. It is not your first big milestone, and it certainly won't be your last, but this milestone is a momentous one. Your high school diploma is more than an indication that you have completed the necessary coursework of public education; it is a symbol of your transition to full adulthood. You are now independent, and are free to chart your own path forward in life. The choice is yours to further your education or take time to explore the world as a worker or traveler. It is now up to you.

Whatever you choose, know that you have the support of this unique island community behind you wherever you may go. You have been fortunate to grow up in this supportive community. It has deeply shaped you, and you have shaped--and will continue to shape--it.

Your presence in the classroom, in clubs, on the field, and the stage are commemorated here in this book. We celebrate all that you have been here at MVRHS and all that you will become in the world beyond.

Congratulations,

Sara Dingledy
Principal

Letter From The Editor

To the MVRHS Class of 2018,

When you open up the yearbook, you reflect on the memories you shared with your peers throughout your four years of high school. I know for a fact that every single one of you are excited to leave (including myself), to go on and start a new chapter in your life. Whether you like it or not MVRHS has been a big part of your life and the people who have taught you, laughed with you, and have been there for you, have shaped you into the person you are today. The amount of love, support, and help from faculty, the student body, and outside sources is unbelievable, so I would like to give a huge thank you to those who contributed to make this book possible.

In this book, the yearbook staff incorporated doodles from students who love to draw in their free time. We tried making this book as unique as possible by adding as much student artwork as we could. I think that each and every single one of us has something unique and something different. It's important to show the world that side of you. Don't be afraid to open up new doors that could lead to great opportunities for yourself. This is your time, your moment, and anything is possible. As long as you want it, you can obtain it.

All the best,
Myllenna DeOliveira

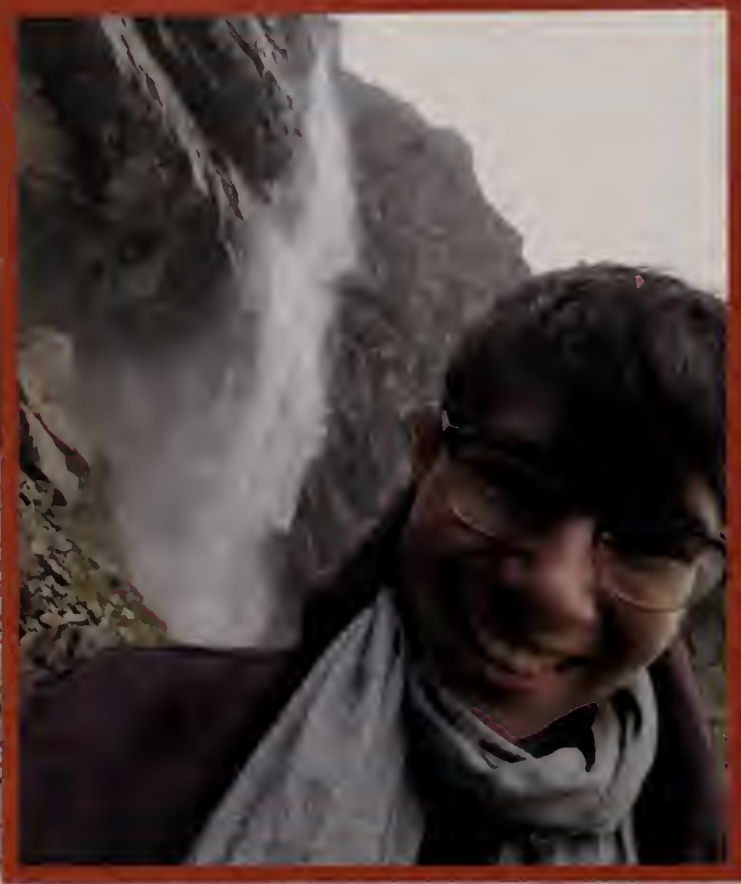
Alex Nagle



For the past school year I have participated in a year long exchange in a small french speaking city called Sierre in Switzerland it's been a fantastic year though not always easy. I found a new home with family and friends in a place I would have never known before. There are a few things that I miss from the island but I know that if given the chance to do it again I would say yes without hesitation. -Alex Nagle

Football team tackles adversity

BY MACKENZIE CONDON

Injuries and suspensions reduced the number of players on the regional high school's football team so drastically that last week administrators announced they were cancelling the rest of the football season. The news came just two days prior to the team's final game, a home game against Greater New Bedford Vocational Technical High School played last Friday, November 3.

Senior captain Zach Moreis said, "With low numbers from the start, we had known it would be a possibility. We noticed coming into the final week that something was off."

Senior captain Sam Rollins said, "We knew it was the right decision since it would have become a safety risk to continue competitive play with such fragile numbers. Naturally, the team, especially the seniors, were really upset when the idea of cancellation became reality."

Never before had a football season been cancelled. The cancellation also meant that there would be no annual Island Bowl rivalry matchup against Nantucket that started in 1962. This is the first time that the game has been cancelled by the Vineyard.

CURTIS FISHER

Zach took what he called a heartbreaking moment as an opportunity to step up as a leader and make the best of what the team was given. He said, "I knew by the way I acted, everyone else would respond so I just went out and had fun with it. As a captain, everyone looks to you wondering how you will respond and the seniors chose to be positive."

Senior captain Cooper Bennett said, "We couldn't change what happened. The only thing we had control over at that point was that final game. We chose to control the things we could. For the seniors that meant showing up to our last practice, which was the day after being told of the cancellation, and being positive."

There is no such thing as intramural football in college, whereas sports like soccer and lacrosse can be found at the club and intramural level at most colleges. Suddenly, the always distant and unimaginable end to their football careers had become present time for the senior players. Cooper said, "We seniors realized we all had put four years of blood, sweat, and tears into the program and this game would mean the end. We came together on Friday night and we weren't playing for ourselves, but for the guys next to us."

Sam Rollins said, "There was a newfound motivation on Friday night. All of the seniors stepped up and realized this would be it. We just had fun with it and the whole team got behind our idea of just pushing ourselves to the limit one final time."

After superior offensive and defensive play from the team on Friday night, the scoreboard flashed victory. The Vineyard had won 14-0 and exuberant fans rushed the field.

Sam said, "The win was great but it was also special to watch the team completely rally together as one that night."

Junior Mikey Courtney found himself playing for the seniors. He said, "My mindset in the game was just me thinking about the seniors. They are some of my best friends and I wanted so badly for them to end their short season on a high note. I tried to reflect that motivation onto the others players."

Senior captain John Morris believes the team learned beneficial life lessons that could not have been replicated without such unfortunate circumstances. He said, "The whole situation taught me a lot about staying strong through hard times and the importance of helping keep the spirits of others up. Everyone easily could've just felt down about it."

Evident from the team's win, the moral never wavered. When asked what aspect of the team he takes most pride in, Zach answered without a moment to think—"The fight." This season's football team has faced a lot of adversity. From that came an opportunity for the true, relentless willpower of the players to be tested. Zach said, "We were challenged. The way the team responded, you can't ask for anything more. No matter how many games we didn't win or how many rough weeks of practice we had, every single player came out and played their absolute hardest on Friday and for that, there can be no regrets." Peformances showcase student talent

BY KATIE MORSE

Singing voices belted, actors performed, and music notes rang out from the school's Performing Arts Center (PAC) during the 40-minute long flex block last Wednesday and Thursday. The two-day endeavor, called Assesment Day, has served for 17 years as a time for performing arts classes to present what they have been working on all quarter on a bigger stage and for a bigger audience of peers. The performances also count towards the students' quarter grade.

The first to take the stage was the orchestra, led by teacher Mike Tinus. Although Assessment Day has been around for 17 years with many performing arts teachers being around since its creation, nothing is predictable. The orchestra performed multiple pieces, one of which was quite unusual—a Bach fugue accompanied by a drum set.

In between each performance, the sound technology class's digital music poured out of the speakers. The class learned to edit, arrange and experiment with instruments, their own voices, and other melodic mediums. The students record their own music with Garageband and their finished pieces were presented at the time between each on-stage act on Assessment Day.

Junior Minnesinger Mary Morgan said, "I like that Assessment Day is an opportunity to see and experience what other classes are doing."

Music teacher and assistant director, Ms. Chandler, said, "It's important for the students in our performing groups to see what the other performing groups do."

Jan Wightman, Performing Arts Department Chair, believes that the in-school performances are a better alternative. She said, "The concerts felt too rushed. Assessment Day gives us an opportunity to work on pieces in front of a supportive audience."

As the Chorus gathered on the stage, students led their peers in warm-ups. Chorus is divided into a freshman class and the vocal ensemble class for Minnesingers and upperclassmen. The groups learn some pieces together and some independently. One of the pieces performed by both groups added to the unpredictable theme of Assessment Day. The piece "Walking in the Air" included a sign language component taught by senior Evelyn Higgins.

EMILY GAZZANIGA

Jacob Hairiston plays the bass clarinet on Assessment Day.

On Thursday, Brooke Ditchfield, the theater and musical theater production teacher, let her students introduce their classes. Theater class encompasses components such as directing, writing, sound and light technology, as well as acting. From the lights to the acting, all elements of the skit they performed were student produced. Musical theater students performed songs that they are currently polishing and fine-tuning for the annual Cabaret that comes at the end of the semester.

Band and jazz band took to the stage last. Due to scheduling issues, the normally separated classes have been merged this semester. Mr. Tinus, who also conducts the band classes said, "The classes together allow for more experimentation between different music genres and pushes the students to work on music that they otherwise might not have been exposed to."

Similar to that of the different chorus classes, both groups have their own music as well as full group numbers. Group pieces were performed laced with hard-earned solos.

Jan Wightman said, "The most important thing about Assessment Day is that everyone from the department gets to see and enjoy each other and by pulling the whole department in, it's valuable." HSV

Lost and Found

COMMENTARY BY LIZZIE WILLIAMSON

When was the exact moment I lost my imagination? Did it slip away as I learned the differences between realities and illusions?

I miss it. I miss it more than I can say. I miss the feeling of excitement and joy that came to me as I created stories and worlds for characters or dolls. When I was seven, I felt most safe when lost in my own mind. Now, at 17, I feel a little bit lost wherever I am.

Shouldn't I be happy? Isn't my life now exactly what my seven-year-old self used to dream about—being in high school, having a boyfriend, wearing high heels? I should be content with who I have become, but instead I worry about what is to come. Curiosity and a sense of adventure have been replaced with tension, with the fear of receiving a low grade or losing a tennis match, but mostly the fear of judgment.

My favorite place in the world has betrayed me and become an adversary. The beach, with its rolling waves and scalding sand was my serenity. Now the rush of enthusiasm to run into the water has been replaced with the terror of walking on the beach in a bikini. The joy I used to have as a child in one of my favorite places in the world has been taken away. Somewhere along the lines of growing up, my mind became a place where things became less certain. It used to be my best friend, letting me play and create at will. Now it second guesses and torments me. At some point in my life, my safest place turned into my foe. Maybe it happened after seeing more of society and figuring out what 'the look' should be. All of those magazines in the grocery store, that I would look at as my mom was shopping, showing the beautiful women—models who were thin, but not too thin, curvy, but not too curvy, who always had the effortless smiles on their painted faces—flashing images of what society wants now, of what F. Scott Fitzgerald foretold almost 100 years ago: "And I hope she'll be a fool—that's the best thing a girl can be in this world, a beautiful little fool."

Ignorance encourages vanity, but maybe knowledge is what kills imagination. The more we know what's right and reasonable, the less we spend on dreaming up unrealistic thoughts. I thought that one day I would look exactly like the women on the magazine covers, but slowly learned that that dream would never be obtainable. Once a dream becomes unattainable, maybe that's when imagination begins to falter. Maybe we do not want to let ourselves down so we stop trying to get our hopes up.

It's human nature then to yearn for what we don't have and then want more (or in some cases give up wanting things at all) as soon as we attain it. One of the most prominent attributes of humans is their greed. Once we grasp the concept of greed, is that what will eventually contribute to the death of the imagination? I am tired of the lust for wanting and trying to be everything. I am tired of thinking of myself as not being good enough. I am tired of the cycle of giving up something in order to gain it. I used to lose myself while my mind imagined all sorts of impossible universes. Now my imagination just seems lost. Did I somehow give up my childhood and imagination to become an adult?

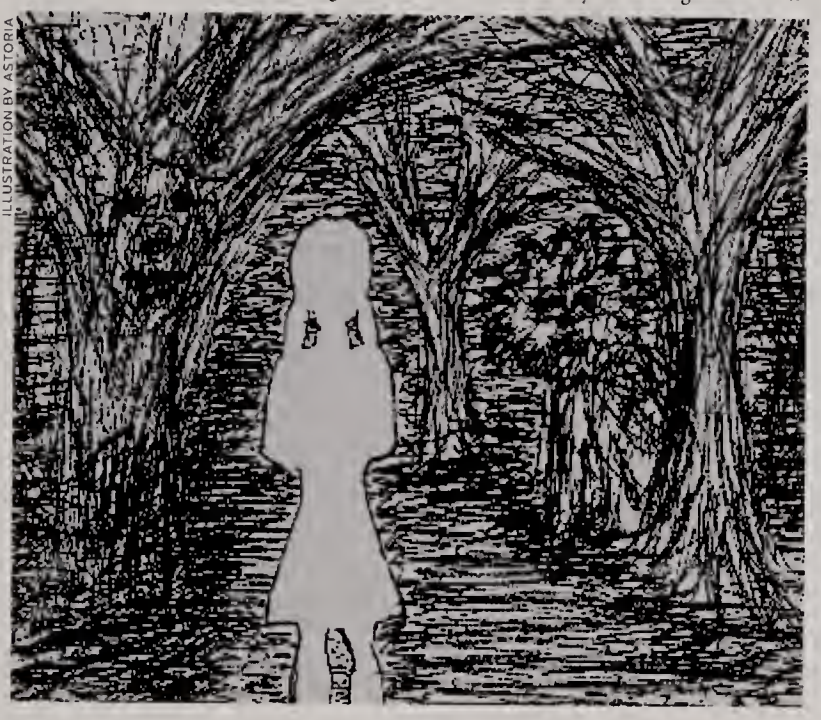

ILLUSTRATION BY ASTORIA

But what if I didn't? What if instead of my imagination deteriorating, it just morphed into something else? My imagination was my escape as a child. Now, I find my happiness and serenity in smiles of friends and family. Maybe childhood imagination grows into love and the appreciation of real friendship. No longer are the characters and make-believe friends hidden for only my eyes and mind—they are real life experiences with loved ones. Make-believe has become adventure time, and what used to be an inner monologue is now a conversation constantly filled with laughter.

I traded the island of Neverland for the island of Martha's Vineyard. I miss my imagination and the adventures I had with myself. The hours spent at night listening for Tinker Bell's chimes or the excitement of seeing shadows dance across the wall from Peter Pan. But now, I have the ability to create my own realities with friends. I may have lost a form of my imagination, but maybe I have found something even better. HSV

National Honor Society inductees recognized at ceremony

BY MACKENZIE CONDON

Thirty-two juniors and eight seniors were inducted into the Martha's Vineyard Regional High School's (MVRHS) National Honor Society (NHS) chapter, in recognition of their scholarship, leadership, character, and service. The National Honor Society has been a nationwide organization since 1921 that, according to the organization's website, was created to create enthusiasm for scholarship; to stimulate a desire to render service; to promote leadership; and to develop character in the students of secondary schools, all of which translates into the criteria for admission.

Dr. Carrie Fyler is the faculty advisor this year. She said, "I thought it would be a good fit for me. I have always held my students to a high standard, and I value the characteristics that represent the NHS."

Principal Sara Dingledy, Superintendent Matt D'Andrea, and Dr. Fyler spoke to the crowd of inductees and proud family members and friends at the induction ceremony. The rest of the ceremony was led by the senior officers of NHS, each of whom spoke about one of the NHS pillars.

Co-president Kat Roberts explained to the audience her perspective on leadership and how everyone has leadership qualities within them. She said, "I believe there is a false notion about there being two distinct types of people: leaders and followers. I've learned through leadership opportunities that nearly everyone has innate qualities of leadership, and it is only a matter of finding those qualities within you."

Co-president Rose Engler talked about scholarship and focused on the importance of interdisciplinary thinking and syncretism rather than keeping school subjects separate. "We challenge you to begin to see how your physics class connects with your calculus class, or your Spanish class relates to your history class," she said. "We challenge you to fall in love with learning." Rose also stressed the necessity of being curious about the world. She said, "Question everything. Question yourself, your peers, teachers, and community members. And don't feel embarrassed to sound dumb, because if you're on the quest for understanding, you're the smartest one in the room."

Historian Maggie Burke talked about the pillar of character and how she has learned that the little things one does makes up their character. She reflected on how ever since she was little her mother would ask her and her brother: "What did you do today to change the world?" She said, "I want to challenge you all to ask yourselves that question as well. You don't have to have a grand scheme to save the world—something as simple as cheering up your friend or inviting someone to sit with you at lunch or being kind to a stranger would suffice."

Treasurer Sam Rollins spoke about service. He focused on his personal experience volunteering at the Boys and Girls Club after school since sophomore year and how nothing could match the feeling of kids' faces lighting up when they saw he was volunteering that day.

After the officers finished their speeches, they lit a candle for each of the four pillars of the NHS. They invited the inductees to receive their certificate and gather on the stage. The officers read the NHS pledge line by line and the inductees repeated each line.

Junior inductee Kayla Eddy said, "Being admitted to the NHS is a special achievement, because admission recognizes being good all-around people. It's not just about grades or test scores, but acknowledges who we are beyond paper."

Dr. Fyler said, "The students in the NHS work hard to become respected members of our school and our community. They are remarkable young people whose efforts have and will continue to pay off in the years to come."

Junior inductee Owen Porterfield said, "It means a lot to be recognized and celebrated for our hard work." HSV

Kat, you are such a unique, independent and exceptional person, We marvel at all you've accomplished and love you for remaining humble, caring, and giving. As you move on to the next phase of your life keep facing challenges with determination and remember to take time to have some fun! We are so excited to see what the next 4 years at Hamilton have in store for you.

Love, Dad and Mom

Congratulations Devon! We are so proud of you. We love you and believe in you! Mama, Dad and Aaron
